“Simplicity” makes its debut at Long Stanton

The newest member of the Long Stanton Manufacturing family has made its debut. The TruPunch 2020, nicknamed “Simplicity,” officially became a working member of our manufacturing team.

When the opportunity to purchase the TruPunch 2020 was presented to company president Marvin Cunningham and VP/COO Tom Kachovec, they knew immediately it was too good to pass up. Marvin commented, “We are constantly striving to improve our company, people and manufacturing services. This state of the art machine represents a significant investment in our future.”

After the TruPunch was installed, Long Stanton provided comprehensive training for five of our employees. This training included a complete introduction to every aspect of the TruPunch 2020 including hardware, software and its operation.

Two of our experienced operators were selected to be trained to be the first to run the TruPunch to its full capabilities. David Klitz and Steven Neal had extensive experience on the Finn Power Shear Genius. And as Tom Kachovec observed, “We were not surprised at the way they soaked up all of the training that was offered. They both appreciate the opportunity to learn new things and to operate this machine to its fullest potential. Each of them is well aware that this investment represents the next step in the evolution of manufacturing at Long Stanton.”

After training, and a short time of operating “Simplicity,” David and Steven spoke about its benefits. “It’s more efficient, it has increased capabilities, it’s more accurate, has less waste, offers more speed, with far less noise and much quicker changeovers.” Added Tom, “these production enhancements fit perfectly with our goals at Long Stanton.”

When the Executive Team presented this investment opportunity to CEO Dan Cunningham he was in full agreement with their plan. After operating the TruPunch for the first couple of weeks, the Team nicknamed their newest addition, “Simplicity”. The combination of technology and advanced manufacturing applications just makes the punching, forming and tapping processes... simpler.

“The TruPunch 2020 investment provides our customers with more efficient punching, forming and tapping capabilities. It's a game changer.”
